Box and Cox (1964) developed the transformation. Estimation of any Box-Cox parameters is by maximum likelihood. Box and Cox (1964) offered an example in which the data had the form of survival times but the underlying biological structure was of hazard rates, and the transformation identified this.

Sap is a fluid transported in xylem cells (vessel elements or tracheids) or phloem sieve tube elements of a plant. These cells transport water and nutrients throughout the plant. Sap is distinct from latex, resin, or cell sap; it is a separate substance, separately produced, and with different components and functions.

Plant Foods with Practically No Detectable B12 Analogue. Various studies have tested the foods in Table 1 for B12 analogues and found none. To my knowledge, other than in studies (described below) in which B12 or cow manure were carefully added to the growing medium of plants, no published study has shown any B12 analogues in any of these foods.

Fig. 1 explains the theoretical impact of renewable with a text-book model of electricity market. This figure shows that new renewable facilities “shifts” the supply curve, which in turn decreases prices. Given the intermittence of these technologies, the supply curve will increase and decrease depending upon climatologic conditions, which increases further the inherently “as large scale ...
